2nd Period Lesson -- Recognition (Shelfwork): Using the blank comic strip sheet provided, draw a comic of an advisory running smoothly. Show and label all parts.

2nd Period Lesson -- Recall Practice: Write a self-reflection on the back of the comic. Feedback from the reflection will be used to run group meetings in advisory.

3rd Period Lesson -- Student Application--Run a student meeting according to the checklist without interruption and independent of the teacher's input.

Plan for Differentiation
Teaching A handful of students needs guidance in understanding why we have group meetings; they have little buy-in and cause behavioral issues in the meetings. I might have to look over their reflections as they write and help them take the assignment seriously.	Work The work assigned asks open-ended questions and allows for creative solutions. Students can give as much or as little as they want.	Assessment I will watch them run the meeting at the end of class and offer personalized feedback on their work.

Outside Support --Who, What, How? There is little outside support, as I run the advisory group myself, but I might ask for input from Caroline, who runs beautifully smooth meetings with clear expectations and cooperative students. I could show her the recorded video of my meeting.

Formal Assessments
Formal Assessment: Written assignments
Summative Assessment: A student-run meeting
